Epilogue: Looking Ahead

REMEMBER AMERICA.

change the

—MARSHALL GANZ

The United States needs to be reimagined. What it has been doing for the past several decades has not worked for the majority of its people. A huge and growing segment of the American population has been left out of full participation in the society as a result of joblessness, underemployment, inadequate education, and political and economic inequality. Opportunities of all kinds have been constrained. The great promise of America, which had always viewed itself as a vibrant, upwardly mobile, fair, and just society, has been undermined by the self-inflicted wounds of near-perpetual warfare, irresponsible and grotesquely exploitive economic behavior, and political dysfunction. There was no reason this had to happen. There was nothing inevitable about it.

Efforts to recuperate artists who were victims of prejudice might be seen as special pleading. Would the music of the historically oppressed—whether the composers are Jewish, Black, or female—compel our attention if we knew nothing of their struggles? Aren't we rewriting history to compensate for past misdeeds?

"A Mother of a Revolution!"

-Omar Thomas(2019)

DREAM

"A Mother of a Revolution!" is a piece written to honor Marsha P. Johnson, a black transgender activist, known for her involvement in the Stonewall riots. This piece starts with a deep hum and mechanical brass motif, showing the drive and power of those involved in the 1969 Stonewall uprising. As a musical piece itself, it's caused controversy as some deemed it "violent" and "too political". Yet in high schools and colleges alike, it's played and heard by many audiences. It's message has been spread across America, honoring diversity and pride!
